STERILIZATION COSTS PLUS INSTRUMENT REPAIRS

WHAT about expensive repairs and replacements of instruments damaged by rust and chemical corrosion in sterilization? Shouldn't these losses be charged to "The high cost of sterilization."?

BARD-PARKER Formaldehyde GERMICIDE is non-injurious to all metal instruments, syringes, hypodermic needles, the keen edges of Bard-Parker knives and heat treated rubber. Instruments may be immersed indefinitely without danger of rust or corrosion.

Bard-Parker Germicide possesses high germicidal efficiency. Bacteriological tests of cultures exposed to this germicide indicate destruction of the non-spore bearing bacteria: M. aureus, B. typhosus and S. haemolyticus in 2 minutes, and the destruction of the spore bearing organism b. anthracis and its spores in 1 hour.

Bard-Parker Germicide gives you rapid sterilization and complete instrument protection. That is why it is proving to be one of the most economical methods of sterilization in use today. Why not give it a trial?

MEAD'S is the Viosterol that was originally worked out for dosage and potency at Johns Hopkins, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Chicago Universities under fellowships established by Mead Johnson and Company.

When you specify MEAD'S Viosterol, your patient gets the brand with the longest continuous laboratory and clinical experience — and without anti-professional dosage directions that go over your head or behind your back to your patient.

If this is worth your while, will you please cooperate by personally seeing that your druggist supplies your patient not with Viosterol, but with Mead's Viosterol.

MEAD'S VIOSTEROL IN OIL, 250 D

It is safe to say — based upon extensive clinical research by authoritative investigators (reprints on request) — that when used in the indicated dosage, Mead's Viosterol in Oil, 250 D is a specific in almost all cases of human rickets, regardless of degree and duration, as demonstrated serologically, roentgenologically, and clinically. Samples and literature to physicians only, on request. Mead Johnson & Company, Evansville, Indiana, U.S.A., Pioneers in Vitamin Research — Specialists in Infant Diet Materials.

Please enclose professional card when requesting samples of Mead Johnson products to cooperate in preventing their reaching unauthorized persons
